

Young poets perform at festival

Two students from the Victoria Education Centre in Poole performed a selection of poems to the audience at Seen But Seldom Heard at the Bridport Open Book Festival. Hugo Lucas-Rowe, right, and David Young had the help of professional poet Liv Torc and their teacher Annie Caldwell. The poems describe the emotions the students are performing using his electronic voice box. The project which included an eight minute documentary of the project which included a series of poetry workshops.